WHITEWATER HIGH SCHOOL FIVE WIN FROM MILTON

Milton, March 4.—The Whitewater and Milton high schools put on an interesting basketball game at the college gym Friday afternoon. The visitors outplayed the home team slightly, won, 18 to 15. Both teams were weak at basket shooting. Milton being the best team of the two. Whitewater did the best teamwork. The home team lost out on poor dribbling and passing. A good sized gallery was in attendance from Whitewater. Referee, Lush, of Milton College.

Military Band: Members of the newly organized military band of this city Thursday evening furnished the music at the rink for the hard times skating party given by the Lakota club. Parker Putnam furnished the cafeteria lunch for the occasion.

REPORT ON ICE JAM RECEIVED BY MOORE

State Engineers Find Nothing Can Be Done to Relieve Situation Without Unjustified Expense.

That nothing can be done to relieve the situation caused by the ice jam near Town Line bridge a few weeks ago at an unjustified expense, is the substance of the report by C. M. Larson and M. W. Torkelson, engineers for the state railroad and highway commission, a copy of which was received today by County Highway Commissioner Charles E. Moore. Residents in the vicinity of the Town Line bridge protested to the county authorities at the damage and inconvenience caused them as a result of the abnormal river conditions, the claim being advanced that the bridge of the Rockford and Interurban company just north of Beloit was responsible for the jam. Highway Commissioner Moore at once took up the matter with the state authorities and an inspection was made by the engineers of the two commissions.

The report says in part: "We observed the condition of the river at the three bridges; at the highway bridge north of the dam in the city of Beloit, at the interurban near the city of Janesville, and at the Town Line bridge. The appearance of the ice at the first two indicated that the ice field immediately above the bridges had not broken up. The ice under the Town Line bridge had gone out and floating ice was jammed tightly under the bridge high enough to freeze around the lower cord members. We do not believe this bridge had anything to do with the condition complained of."

"Just how much the interurban bridge should be blamed for the condition of the river is difficult to say, but we believe very little. There are numerous well authenticated instances where conditions similar to those which obtained along the Rock river have obtained in streams where there was absolutely no bridge. Where obstruction of any kind. Where rivers carry much floating ice at freezing temperature there is a tendency for this ice to gather along the shores, and particularly at bends in the channel often becomes so obstructed as to cause the river to rise much above its natural stage at the same discharge."

"We do not believe that anything can be done to relieve the present situation except at an unjustified expense. If the conditions were that the river was obstructed at simply one point it would be a practical matter to remove the obstruction. Judgment is that the obstruction extends all the way from the interurban bridge at Beloit to a point some distance above the Town Line bridge, in all a distance of probably eight or ten miles. So far as we could learn the present condition has never occurred before in so aggravated a form; it is believed to be many years before there is a recurrence."

Safety First

C. & N. W. Railway. R. K. Smith has been assigned the day dispatching job.

Engineer L. Gesland has taken the 7 a. m. switch engine.

J. W. Coen has been assigned to a run between Fond du Lac and Butler.

D. Courtney has taken another position besides his regular one. During the past few days he has been acting as grievance man for the machinist helpers.

James Murphy is on the sick list and has been laying off for a few days.

Workmen have been repairing a hole in one of the walls. Yesterday Leo Murtough was in a little encounter with one of the boys and in some way he got a cut on his left hand. As a result he is nursing a bruised hand.

ENRICH THE BLOOD

Hood's Sarsaparilla, a Spring Tonic—Medicine is Necessary. Everybody is troubled this season with loss of vitality, failure of appetite, that tired feeling, or with bilious turns, dull headaches, indigestion and other stomach troubles, or with pimples and other eruptions on the face and body. The reason is that the blood is impure and impoverished. Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all these ailments. It is the old reliable medicine that has stood the test of forty years, that makes pure, rich, red blood—that strengthens every organ and builds up the whole system. It is the all-the-year-round blood-purifier and health-giver. It embodies the careful training, experience, and skill of Mr. Hood, a pharmacist for fifty years, in its quality and power to cure. SURPRISED FRIENDS BY MORNING WEDDING

Miss Helen King Becomes Bride of Earl W. Williams, Tobacco Company Representative Here.

Miss Helen King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. King, 115 South Main street, and Earl W. Williams of Grand Lodge, Mich., representative of the American Tobacco company, in Madison, Wis., were married at 11 o'clock this morning, after a hurried trip to the court house and a special dispensation issued by Judge Charles L. Field in the county court. Only the immediate relatives were present at the ceremony. Mr. Williams was attended by Louis Brown, and Miss King by Miss Myra Couvaul of Chicago. The couple had laid their plans so carefully that but a few relatives knew of the culmination of a happy romance in the pledging of the wedding vows. Mr. and Mrs. Williams eluded the wedding party following the breakfast, and departed at 11 o'clock for Beloit. After a honeymoon tour in Michigan and a visit at the home of the bride's grandparents, they will make their residence in Madison.

The Biggest Story Ever Printed in America

"1917?" is just a story — but what a story!—a story the like of which has never before been set in type in America—a story that will make every individual hair of your head stand on end—a story of love and lovers—of detectives and scheming, treacherous spies—of beautiful women and strong men mad with passion—a story that will go down through the ages as the greatest story ever written in America and the FIRST GREAT AMERICAN NOVEL.

"1917?" is a brand new story that no one yet has read except The Chicago Tribune editors—a story just finished by Edwin Balmer, famed as one of the greatest living writers, whose heroes and heroines are living, breathing, flesh and blood human beings who feel the farthest depths of passion and climb to the sublimest heights.

Every man who has a spark of manhood in his breast must read this novel. Every mother—every sister—every wife—every girl who will some day be a wife—MUST READ THIS STORY of Lieutenant Bob Wendell and his bride, of Jim Ashby and his sweetheart—this story that is terrible in its love and in its dangers dared—this story that will grip, enthrall and thrill you as no novel ever did before.

Read the first big, double-page installment of "1917?" in tomorrow's Chicago Sunday Tribune if it's the last thing on earth you do. It is the most graphic, tragic story ever put before you. No horror-pictures of the great Dumas, no bloody pirate stories by Robert Louis Stevenson, could ever grip your heart-strings like this tale of Edwin Balmer's. It is the greatest work this master mind has ever done—it is the CAPSHEAF OF EDWIN BALMER'S FAME. No matter what else you do, or do not do, READ THE FIRST INSTALLMENT OF "1917?" TOMORROW.

Below the two, the fat man, Bat, looking up, beheld his confederate in the grip of the law. Helen was too late to aid the officer to save himself, but the plucky policeman gripped Sykes around the neck as he plunged forward himself, and before the fat man in the room, watching apprehensively, could draw a full breath, the two men crashed violently through the skylight together almost on top of him. As it was, they landed in a heap on the bed. The Bat sprang at once on the helpless policeman. It would have gone hard with him but for instant aid from Helen. She dropped down the open skylight, caught the revolver from the officer's hand and held the two criminals at the point of it until the policeman could slip handcuffs on them. When the two men were secured, Helen demanded the stolen money.

The man Bat did most of the talking. "I don't know what you are talking about," he said jovially, while Helen's accusations were launched at him. "I am a piano tuner, officer. I don't know this man," he pointed calmly at Sykes. "I never saw him in my life till he smashed my skylight. What do you mean, anyway, by breaking into my room? I'll put the blue-eyes laws on you. Who's going to pay for all this glass?" he demanded with an injured air. "The landlord is going to come after me for it. I'll have your whole bunch arrested the minute I get to the police station. I don't know anything about your money. I don't believe you've got any money or have had any."

"What did you attack the policeman for as soon as he dropped into the room?" cried Helen, indignantly. "Why, miss, I am near-sighted. I thought that man was a piano tuner when I saw him—a man that's tried to let the light into me two or three times with a gun—it's a fact!"

The officer shut off the Bat's talk, and Helen, with the astuteness of a detective, searched him, with the result that from his various pockets she recovered every package of the bills stolen from the safe, and nearly all of them intact.

The fat man lost none of his nerve when confronted with the result. He declared he had been made the victim of a plot, that his character and reputation were known everywhere in the city—which was quite true. And having denounced all unwarranted intrusions such as he had been made the victim of, he resigned himself to go as a prisoner with a much better grace than his sullen companion did. They were taken together to the police station.

Helen telephoned immediately for a motor car, and, accompanied by her friendly officer, and with the money stowed away on her person, she stepped into the car and ordered it driven in haste to Signal. Past all the landscape flew by it did not keep pace with Helen's impatience. They drew in sight of Rhineland's camp. Smoke still rose from where the fire had threatened its complete destruction. Rhineland and Wood, with their men, had snally extinguished the conflagration, though not until a heavy toll of damage had been taken by the flames. Helen caught sight of Rhineland just as the car raced up to the camp and, alighting, called him joyfully to her, waving the money in her great excitement; in her hands.

"It's here," she cried. "Most every bit of it." "What do you mean?" "The pay roll! We've got it—all of it—the money stolen from the safe. It is here in this package." Rhineland, half-dazed, could hardly ask explanations. Bit by bit Helen told the story. Her foster uncle caught her in his arms, money and all. Together—the men crowding around—they walked through the recovered treasure through the half-burned camp. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

news notes from movieland. Lois Meredith, who has won success on the stage and screen, is working in a five-reel production under the direction of Harry Harvey at the Long Beach studios. Besides starring in a number of film productions, Miss Meredith played in "Everywoman," taking the part of "Modesty" and followed Laurette Taylor in "Peg O' My Heart." She was also selected for the feminine lead in "Help Wanted," when it opened in New York. She is one of the youngest stars in films and is not yet of age. Severely specially written feature film plays have been provided for her.

"MUSTY SUFFER" IS FUNNIEST COMEDY

Judging from reports reaching here from New York the "Misadventure of Musty Suffer" is the funniest comedy that has ever been filmed anywhere. The cast includes: Bickford, Watson, Grimmons and Gore, Tom Nawn, Snitz Edwards, Maxfield Moree and H. W. McCullon.

The comedy itself is pure concentrated mirth, scintillating and sparkling with perhaps just a wee bit of the slapstick as a seasoning, but in no line, no situation which took weeks of production, is to be found a single bit of vulgarity or anything approaching it.

THINKS OF ACTRESS AS HE GOES TO WAR

Mable Trunelle, the star featured with Robert Connors in "The Crucifixion of Philip Stang," is much admired in England and, as a result, she receives these days many letters from soldiers about to depart for the front. She says none touched her so deeply as a simple, respectful letter of admiration from such a soldier, which read: "I am making many sacrifices to go to the front to fight. I am the only son of a poor of my widowed mother. But it is going to give up one's life for his king and country. I wish you would send me your picture to take with me to the trenches."

Annette Kellmeyer, star of the million-dollar production that is being made in the West Indies under the direction of Herbert Brenon, may give done by a repertoire company in Janesville.

Harry Ellis, the manager of the company is in the city and assures us that all the plays produced by the Hickman company will be entirely new. They are, in fact, all royalty plays and most of them were written for Mr. Hickman's exclusive use and all of them are being presented by him under rigid contracts with the author.

Mr. Hickman has surrounded himself with the strongest company he has ever had among whom are Miss Virginia Stanton, Eugene McDonald, Bessie Fitzgerald, Harry Marlin and others.

The opening play will be "Putting It Over," a farce written for Mr. Hickman by Willard Mack, the author of "Kick In," "So Much for So-Much" and "Jane O'Day of Broadway," now being played by Blanche Ring in Chicago.

Ladies will be admitted free on the opening night with each paid 30c ticket.

AT THE APOLLO.

Geraldine Farrar in "The Temptation." On Monday Jesse L. Lasky will present at the Apollo the metropolitan opera star, Geraldine Farrar, in her latest photoplay "Temptation."

Renee Dupree (Miss Farrar), a young cafe singer, living in the Bohemian section of New York, is engaged to be married to Julian, a young violinist and composer. They are both poor, but Julian, who has just finished an opera, hopes to marry Renee when it is produced. One afternoon, when Renee and Julian are singing and playing at the Ritz, Otto Muller, the great impresario, is struck with Renee's beauty and voice and offers her a position in his opera company. Renee makes good at the trial, much to the anger of Mrs. Maroff, Muller's mistress, and is given an opportunity to sing a star role. Renee succeeds, and Muller, captivated, plans to make her his favorite and supply her with every luxury. He engages an apartment for Renee and gives her a contract at an enormous salary.

When Renee discovers why these gifts are offered her she scorns Muller and returns heartbroken to tell Julian of her great disappointment. Muller follows and finds her with Julian and in his anger and jealousy threatens to kill Renee's career if she persists in sticking to Julian and refuses to come to him. Renee again refuses and Muller leaves, promising to crush them both.

Muller keeps his word. Renee and Julian cannot find employment in their profession. Finally Julian takes a job in an iron factory. His opera is about to be produced when Muller has it killed. Renee offers herself to Muller on condition that he produce Julian's opera. The opera is produced and Renee in the star role makes a great success. At the end of the first performance Renee puts Julian off with an excuse and goes to keep her bargain with Muller.

Muller tries to call out but cannot, and is only able to write the name of the woman who stabbed him before he dies. Renee enters to find Muller dead and sees by the note that he has been killed by Maroff. She then realizes that she has been saved by a miracle and goes to Julian, who never knows the sacrifice she was to have made for him and through which his life was saved and his name and fortune made.

AT THE APOLLO. Marguerite Clark's recent screen vehicle, "Helene of the North," presented this dainty star in the most unique characterization she has yet assumed since her triumphal debut in motion pictures. The latest five-part feature combines in a decidedly novel manner the cultured atmosphere of the aristocratic society of the trackless wastes of northwestern Canada. It will be seen at the Apollo on Tuesday.

Aside from the extraordinary atmospheric qualities of this dramatic romance, the entire construction of the story is very original, beginning as it does in the fashionable home of an English society lady and developing from that sheltered spot into the open spaces of the Canadian woods, where a veritable melodramatic plot ensues, culminating romantically in the cozy corner where the drama began.

AT THE APOLLO.

Marguerite Clark in "Helene of the North." Following her marvelous performance in the dual title role of the adaptation of "The Prince and the Pauper," the first of the inimitable Mark Twain's works to be transferred to the screen as a feature, Marguerite Clark appears as the star in the famous Players Film company's presentation of the popular, theatrical success "Helene of the North," which will be the Paramount picture at the Apollo on Wednesday.

Why March is the Most Dangerous Month.

March is the most dangerous month of the year because the change of season is more than a good many systems can stand. Too often it is true that the sick "last only till spring." But if the system is fortified, if the impurities are driven from the blood and the nerve tissues are with wholesome and strength-giving food medicine, there is no danger in the change of seasons. Father John's Medicine is invaluable as a tonic in the spring. It strengthens the system and drives out the poisonous waste matter—builds up the body. It is this power that has made it so successful for colds and throat troubles. No weakening stimulants morphine or other dangerous drugs or alcohol.

If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your drugist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

CHAPTER X

Deep in South America, on the ragged fringe of the outskirts of progress, Alan Wayne was pushing a long bridge across a dried-up watercourse. He was sick, tired, disgusted. Over and over again he had grumbled to McDougal that it was a job for a mason and McDougal had patiently answered, "I'm the mason, Mr. Wayne. Do you lie by a wee and gie the fever a chance to get out of the body." But Alan stuck jealously to his job. Ten Percent Wayne might retire on his laurels but he could never be beaten.

Every third day the fever in his bones seized his body in a grip that could not be denied, shook it till it rattled and cast it down limp, cold and hot, teeth chattering and then clenched, and then chattering again. But on the days between Alan made up for the lulls. He became a devil hanging on the backs of his men and driving them to superhuman efforts. Terror held them. They were Italians, far from home. A wilderness stretched between them and the sea. The sea itself was none of theirs; it was but an added barrier. A madman had them in thrall. Terror drove them. It was a race to finish the bridge before he killed them. "I am going to be sick," he had told them in cold, rapid words, "I am going to be sick, but before I'm finished the bridge is finished." He smiled and made a gesture with his hand to show how he would brush them all off into the dry gorge. His smile terrified more than the raised hand.

The giant gang-boss, McDougal, stood by and nodded solemn confirmation. When Alan was ill by day, McDougal left him and drove the men in his stead, but when the hour for knocking off came with the sudden eclipse of the sun by the horizon, he hurried to Alan's tent, fished him out from some corner on the floor, wrapped him in blankets, dosed him with quinine, tempted him with poor, weak broths and nursed him, unprotesting, through the night.

McDougal had followed Alan into strange lands and strange places and seen him in many a deep hole, and through it all Alan had been the same—a purring dynamo at work. He had been the same until this trip into the Brazilian wilderness, and here a change had come over him. There were times when he talked and what he said was, "No more trips for me, McDougal. I'm a consulting engineer from this on." McDougal had heard more than one man talk like that under fever and he frowned, trying to remember one of them that had ever come back.

Alan was lured to river fever. He had fought it often, and when he saw the fetid pools of stagnant water in the dried-up watercourse he knew he would have to fight it again. Somehow, some night, a mosquito was bound to get at him, and the fever would begin. He doubted his preventive dose of quinine, but he could not double his spirits for the battle. He came to the field with a gnawing at those sources of health, a calm mind and sure sleep. Sleep did not come as of old after the day's work. Instead he tossed and twisted on his narrow cot and finally would turn on the electric torch to read two letters over and over again.

One he read with a curl of the lip. It was from a pretty woman that had flattered into his life and out. He had forgotten her and now she had come back to buzz words in his buzzing ears. She said, "It costs a woman to learn that happiness is not really tangible. Between being fortunate and happy a girl is fixed. I was fortunate—just not miserable—and stood on the brink of the gulf. Happiness brushed me with its wings. I reached out to catch it and the gulf took me. How long will it be before I climb back to the height that seemed not so very high when I possessed it? I don't know. . . . I do not hate you—only myself. You have known many women, but you have not known me. That is the bitter part. You do not know what I gave you. One thing I ask you and the words as I write are blurred with tears like my eyes—if ever a foolish woman, honest and true as I was, offers you the same sacrifice, do not take it. I have suffered for all the women you will meet."

"Fool," said Alan to himself, "fool, not to see that I turned her wish-washy weakness into strength and loosed a dumb tongue."

And then he drew out the other letter and the curl in his lip straightened out to a line of sweetness and the light in his eyes turned to a fiery, blind adoration. The letter had been sent to him, sealed, by J. Y., who had accompanied it with a note. The letter began, "To my boy at Thirty," and signed, "With undying love, your friend and mother." In life he could not remember his mother, but he saw her now in three pages of laboring words traced by a dying hand. In herself, dying at thirty, she had seen her boy revealed. She had had no strength—no time—left for slow approaches. With the first words of her letter she laid a cooling hand on his burning soul. She spoke the all-seeing wisdom of death. She held him close to her heart and fed him with her life's blood. All that she had been, all that she had learned, all that she foresaw, was crowded into those three pages. They were brittle with age, the ink yellow and faded in words that no eyes but his and hers had ever seen.

"In Two Days," Said He, "The Master Will Be Dead."

They gripped his soul and held it steady. Without this letter he would have torn up the other. But the other had come as a complement and he kept it because it helped him to see himself.

As Alan weakened the bridge approached completion. Batches of men, as special work was finished, were dispatched to the coast. With each batch McDougal strove to send his master, but Alan was too weak to go, though he did not say so. He had realized it with terror and then with calm. "No, McDougal, not this time," he would say, and finally, "I think I might just as well stay on till they send up to take over. It's unprofessional to chuck it before. It won't be long now." And McDougal had cursed low, rolling oaths and taken it out on the men.

Alan seemed to have become childish in his weakness. He spent what strength he had left in cutting words into a board ripped from a kerosene box. When he had finished he called McDougal and showed him his handiwork. "McDougal," he said, "if anything should happen to keep me here permanently just cut these words into some big rock and lay me under it. Be careful you get them just so. The French are mighty particular about the way we use their lingo, and while it wasn't a Frenchman that wrote this bit, I guess he'd be just as particular."

"Awful, sir," said McDougal, stifling his rage within him, "I'll do as you wish." He took the board and looked at it. The words meant nothing to him but the scene meant much. He went out and concluded his agreement with twelve quiet, lowering men gathered from the countryside. They were pioneers without knowing it. They and their fathers and their fathers' fathers had held these far depths of the world against wild beasts and drought and flood since centuries ago.

The Jesuits swept through the subcontinent and left a trail of settlers behind them. They were proud, narrow, independent. They were unimpressive, unimaginative. No man among them had ever thought to lie. They did not steal, though they were robbed whenever they invaded civilization with their wares.

From them McDougal had learned that due east, halfway to the sea, was a place called Lieber's and that this Lieber was known as the Americano and had fame as a curador of fevers. Four men could carry a sick man to Lieber's in a hammock in four days. Twelve men could do it in two, and quicker than that a hundred men could not go. For the price of three steers each—two-year-olds—they would undertake to deliver the sick man to Lieber's in two days. McDougal pondered. It was a chance. If he sent Alan to the rail-head there wouldn't be even a chance. There was no one who could help at the rail-head, nor along the thin line, nor even at the coast.

"In two days," said he despairingly, "the master will be dead."

They gathered at the door of Alan's tent and looked in at him as he lay half comatose. "No," said the oldest of them, "he will be dead in seven days' time."

As McDougal picked him up and laid him gently in a hammock, Alan came to. The hammock was padded with pillows and blankets and strung on a stout bamboo pole with two men at each end supporting it.

"What are you doing with me?" he asked angrily and sank back into the pillows. From there his eyes glared up at McDougal.

"I'm sending ye home," said McDougal gently but firmly.

Alan smiled a twisted smile. "Sending me home," he repeated, and added resignedly, "Oh, all right." Then he started up. "Bring matches," he said. McDougal took matches from his pocket. Alan drew two letters from inside his coat. "Burn them," he held them out and watched jealously as McDougal opened up the sheets with averted eyes and set fire to the thin paper. The flimsy cinders blew blither and blither under the light breeze. The men under the pole moved nervously, anxious to be off. Their eight companions wheeled their sea-bitten ponies and headed for the trail. "No, you don't," shouted McDougal and explained with many gestures that they were to ride behind on account of the dust.

"We know, master," answered one quietly, "we would but start."

McDougal held out an awkward hand in farewell. "You're ready, Mr. Wayne?"

"Yes," said Alan between chattering teeth, and then cried, "No, I want the board—my epitaph thing, you know."

McDougal dived into the tent and brought out the board with the roughly cut words that he could not read but somehow began to understand. He slipped it into the hammock behind the cushions and then just touched Alan's hand and gave the word to the men. They started off in a shambling, rapid trot. The horseman fell in behind. A cloud of dust cut them off from McDougal's gaze. He turned and fell upon his laboring squad with a rolling flood of curses. To them the words were Greek, but nevertheless their blood curdled and they worked as only Wayne had taught them.

Chapter X

Lieber, with Gerry and Kemp, sat in the shade of the veranda, smoking after the midday meal. The stock had been corralled, but on Kemp's advice, the start for Fazenda Florea was to be made half-way through the afternoon. There was to be a great moon that night and the drive would be robbed of the perils of darkness to cattle as well as of the horrible heat.

The three were silent, half somnolent, when a passing herder grunted and pointed westward with his chin. Lieber stood up and looked. A pillar of dust was coming across the desert. He could see men riding and something else. He took his field glasses from a peg and looked again. "Funeral, or a sick man," he said and sat down to wait. Kemp started whistling to keep himself awake. Since the hour of Lieber's confession he had hardly spoken.

When the cavalcade came within easy view Gerry stood up and watched. He could not hide his curiosity like Lieber and Kemp. In front of the horses came four men bearing a sagging hammock on a pole. They were running in quick, springy steps that made the hammock sway gently from side to side. The pace they kept up under the burden was marvelous. They were followed closely by eight horsemen. At the first signs of faltering among the bearers, four of the riders would throw themselves off their ponies and run under the pole. The change of relay was made without a stop, without a pause. The freed ponies stood with hanging heads and straddled legs. Even from a distance one could see that the burdened men had run the wiry little beasts off their feet. They were all in, but the men were still erect—keen. With a final spurt the cortege drew up before the veranda. Lieber stood up. "Dead or dying?" he asked.

"Master, we do not know," answered the oldest of the men, their leader.

"Fever or smallpox?" asked Lieber. "Fever."

With a look of relief Lieber went down the steps to the hammock. A sheet had been thrown over the pole to keep off the worst of the sun. He pulled it off. A ghastly sight met his eyes, but he did not shrink. "Bring him up here," he said, springing up the steps and sweeping a saddle harness and some old magazines off a great rawhide settle on the veranda.

They laid the sick man on the settle and Lieber started to strip him with gentle, deft hands. Kemp strode forward and helped but Gerry stood by, powerless to move. He had recognized Alan, the man he had sworn to break if ever he met him. Somebody else had broken Alan, terribly, pitilessly. Gerry's eyes shrank from the sight. A lump came into his throat. Alan was dead. Alan with whom he had wandered barefoot through those quiet lanes of home, with whom he had fished and swum, and once had fought. What a little fury Alan had been in that boys' battle! It had not been fought to a finish. On one impulse they had stopped and looked at each other and turned away, ashamed to shake hands.

But it was not so. The irrepressible one raised the cup of tea to his lips, and after taking a little sip laid the cup on a chair beside him. Wondering what was the matter, one of the visitors asked his reason for doing so.

This was his opportunity. "Well, one day, when Dorothy's mother was reading to the little maid, she came to the word 'gravitation.' She explained its meaning, but thought the child would forget it. Consequently she was much surprised when, a few days later, Dorothy came running in, crying: 'Oh, mother! it's such a good thing for me there's a law of gravitation, if there wasn't, I'd have surely tumbled head over heels into heaven just now!'"

Scarce. "Has he a sense of humor?" "Yes, indeed. He can see a joke on the other fellow right off the bat."

"That isn't sufficient. What I'm looking for is a man who can see the humor of a joke on himself."

Tax Reduction Is Hard to Figure Out
If Ten Year Period Is Considered—Milwaukee Faces
Typhoid Crisis.

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, March 4.—The events of the past week have been so full of interest and importance that, as in 1861, congress is full of cowardice and disloyalty. They also point very strongly to a new political line-up, such as I have been predicting. Having written in the middle-west a great deal for the past eight months and have taken note of public sentiment, as these letters have from month to month indicated, it is not surprising that I should be so bullish in congress, but there is every assurance that he will have them. There is no community in Wisconsin where he will not have Republican support. The usual Republican trailblazers, a poll of the Wisconsin Tribune showed only Rolley, Democrat, and Fren, and Lenroot, Republican, standing with the president. A very sorry spectacle that, but they will hear from Wisconsin before election day, and they will not be likely to misunderstand Republican policy. Very likely to disappear this year, as they did in 1862. The Lincoln slogan of 1864 may be repeated, "We don't swap horses while crossing a stream."

Have Taxes Been Reduced?

For some months the people of Wisconsin, who think and who are something about state expenditures, had about as much to puzzle over. Men more than they were under the McGovern regime, to understand the fragmentary figures, and the persistent "no" to the state tax commission. The state tax commission is authorized for the statement (see special report dated Dec. 31, 1914) that the gross receipts for the state for 1914 were $1,083,949.51, or 1914 $1,070,949.51. That is an average annual increase of over $1,800,000. The laws are so constructed that most of this increase continues to be paid by the state. The state tax commission, however, has been reduced, does not appear.

The Wall Street Journal had an article the other day from Mr. Kent R. Kenan of this city, discussing the income tax experience of this state. It is the interesting feature of which is the fact that in the first four years, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, firms and individuals paid $4,667,337 and corporations $10,892,938 under the McGovern regime. This is a decrease of $1,230,113.33. Receipts for 1915 were $4,667,337.38, or 1915 $4,667,337.38. That is an average annual increase of over $1,800,000. The laws are so constructed that most of this increase continues to be paid by the state. The state tax commission, however, has been reduced, does not appear.

Assessed Valuations Higher.

A detailed report of the state tax commission, which says by way of introduction that our population increased from 1905 to 1914 inclusive 14.3 per cent, and that the assessed value of property has increased 100 per cent during the same period. It is also worth remembering that local bonded indebtedness has increased rapidly with the growth of assessments, and that a percent cent of the assessed value of property is now being levied for the payment of bonds. It is also worth remembering that the assessed value of property has increased 100 per cent during the same period. It is also worth remembering that local bonded indebtedness has increased rapidly with the growth of assessments, and that a percent cent of the assessed value of property is now being levied for the payment of bonds.

Old Typhoid Story.

Milwaukee is having a perennial typhoid scare, and lake water, into which we are constantly pouring sewage, is held responsible. There is nothing new in the situation, except that the cases of typhoid are now a dozen or more deaths a week. It is an old story, but our great work to exterminate typhoid is to freshen up hospitals and to get greater works of allowing the streets, unwept of filth and to blow unstrained into people's lungs for seven or eight months of the year. It is a great work, but we meet and pass resolutions, officers, and appoint committees, and adjourn to give the devil a chance. At the most we only get the officials created to draw pay reports, occasionally, so they hold their jobs. And we are not doing it. The same conditions exist in this country, and there is no preventive remedy. It does not matter if the same amount of sewage is dumped into the lake, as long as these diseases might be more efficiently applied to the prevention.

Basketball Situation.

Big Nine conference has taken an ardent basketball position. The year that sport has been much interest among the college boys in the western states, as they have with the exception of football, it runs a close second to basketball. It is a surprising fact that in the present time, the game is being played at white heat, as at Madison and Evanston. The game will see Northern and Southern teams in a contest, and the game which cannot be foreseen. Games have been playing at top level, and their standing indicates, the game will be won by a very narrow margin.

year, there is almost as much interest in basketball in the east as there is in the west. Pennsylvania, where the sport has never lost its hold, is at the head of the league, but Princeton and Yale—and possibly Cornell—are dangerous.

"Erie Railroad First."

Advertisement.

The Erie-Railroad Employees Magazine for February has a few paragraphs under the above caption that are worth quoting in this letter, not because they show that the Erie has as well as enterprise, but because it shows that the Erie has a place at the front for the better part of a century, a place closely identified with the railroad development of America, where such development leads the world.

"The Erie Railroad, the first great east-west trunk line, with a history of romance and picturesque legend, is credited with many of the great things done by railroads that have benefited the world. The Erie has helped to put it in its present high state of development in the United States. For example: The Erie was the first railroad in the world to dispatch its trains by telegraph."

"It ran the first emigrant train over the rails, also the first cattle train, and the first milk train. It was the first railroad in the world to use a bell cord. The first 'fast freight' was run over the Erie, the route being between New York and Detroit. A poll of the Wisconsin Tribune showed only Rolley, Democrat, and Fren, and Lenroot, Republican, standing with the president."

"The first excursion train in the United States was run over the Erie from Goshen, N. Y., to New York City, July 13, 1832."

"The first experiment ever made with sleeping cars was made by the Erie, the company building two—the 'Erie' and the 'Ontario'—in 1843. They proved a decided success."

"Uncle Sam made the first contract for railroad mail-carrying with the Erie, therefore it is the longest in government service."

German Notes.

The German-Austrian bazaar at the Auditorium, which opened Thursday night and will run for a week, is for the purpose of raising money for the German and Austrian soldiers. It is an elaborate effort for any such purpose that the city has ever seen and all deep interest in it.

Some of the Wisconsin club women have started a movement to protest against unclean ovals and serials in magazines. This is good and people generally will wish it success. An effort to the state to encourage the reading of such literature might, however, be getting closer to the sources of market for such literature.

Temperance Talk

(By Temperance Educational League)
What Prohibition Is Doing for Colorado.

We have before us the statement of Governor Carr, published in the Colorado Issue under date of Feb. 12 last. This statement shows the advantages derived from prohibition since January 1, 1916, and the prohibition amendment in that state went into effect. The statement of Gov. Carr is as follows:

"Two thousand and fifty new savings accounts were opened in the Denver Savings bank during January, 1916."

For January, 1916, reports of eight Denver banks show $576,000 increase in deposits over January, 1915. Denver bank clearing for January, 1916, were $8,000,000 more than for January, 1915."

Pueblo savings deposits for January, 1916, were $7,000. In January, 1916, they were $23,000."

The collection of Denver's largest department store were 25 per cent more for January, 1916, than for January, 1915. Similar reports are coming from many other lines of business. Merchants report that taxable sales accounts considered 'no good' are being paid up."

The wets claimed that if Denver went dry the stock shows and convalescence would be curtailed. The show held in January, 1916, had 60,000 paid admissions. The largest in its history. It also had a record of $3,000,000 in sales, likewise the largest in its history. It is a fact that taxable sales were more money was spent than ever before by visitors to the show."

Denver jobbers and wholesalers show amazing gains in sales to merchants in smaller cities and towns. The moral tone of the state is improving. In Denver during January, 1916, there were 212 arrests for drunkenness, 39 for disturbances and 421 for other offenses. In January, 1915, there were 212 arrests for drunkenness, 40 for disturbances and 415 for vagrancy. The number of arrests for all causes in Denver, January, 1915, 1,212. For all causes in January, 1916, arrests numbered 525."

The number of inmates in the city jail at Pueblo, February, 1916, was 37. February 1, 1916, the number was six."

Eternal Life, a Present Possession

By REV. WM. W. KETCHUM
Director of Practical Work Course
Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that the Son of God is in you.

God has given one book in the Bible particularly to tell us how we may have eternal life; that book is the Gospel by John, see John 20: 30-31. God has given another book for those who believe, particularly that they may know that they have eternal life; that book is the First Epistle of John, see 1 John 5: 13. If you are not a Christian, the book for you to study is the Gospel by John; if you are a Christian, you should study the First Epistle of John.

After John Wesley had been preaching some time, but without results, someone said to him: "Are you sure, Mr. Wesley, of your salvation?" Wesley replied he was sure that provision had been made for his salvation. "But, are you sure, Mr. Wesley, that you are saved?" It went like an arrow, and he had no rest until he was sure of his salvation.

But is it not presumptuous for one to say, "I know I am saved?" Certainly not, if one really does know he is saved. It honors God and Christ, "for by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God." Paul was able to say, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."

Why should this not be your testimony, if you are a Christian? It can be if your assurance centers in Christ.

Your church membership does not save you. No church on earth can save a man. It is sad, but true, there are undoubtedly multitudes of unconverted church members who are lost. It is not the church, but Christ, who saves. "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

If you are depending upon your morality, it won't save you. Nothing is quite so dishonoring to God and Christ as a sinner's boastful righteousness, which God says is in his sight as filthy rags. To pay your debts, to be a good, true husband or wife, parent or neighbor, does not constitute you a Christian. A Christian is one who, having accepted by faith the Lord Jesus Christ as his Savior, is born from above. Thus he becomes a partaker of the divine nature and will manifest in his life the life of God. See Titus 3: 5.

Again, let me say that you are not saved because you feel you are saved. You can feel saved, and be lost. I board a train. Someone says, "Are you sure you are on the right train?" "Oh, yes, I'm on the right train."

"Well, how do you know you are?" "Oh, because I feel I am." "Non-sense," the person would say. "You can't depend upon your feelings in this matter; what you need is not feeling, but fact." So the right order in the matter of salvation is fact, faith, feeling. If I can believe what man says, assuredly I can believe what God says. See 1 John 5: 9-13.

We do accept the testimony of men; why then should we not accept the testimony of God who says "He that hath the Son hath life." The matter for us to decide is whether we have the Son or not, for upon this depends whether we are saved or not. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life," John 3: 36. It is for us to receive by faith God's gift of his Son. If we really and truly do this, God will do his part—give unto us eternal life.

To believe on the Lord Jesus Christ is not simply to believe that he is the Son of God, the Savior of the world. "The demons," we read, "believe and tremble." Saving faith is a personal appropriation of Christ as one's own Savior.

When I was a boy I was greatly helped by the testimony I used to hear in the Railroad Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoons, from old Mr. Babbage, for years the sexton of the Brick Presbyterian church, Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Babbage had the palsy and with faltering, stammering tongue he gave his testimony.

So far as I can remember it never varied and today I thank God for the oft-repeated testimony of his child. Leaning heavily on the chair in front of him, in faltering accents he would say: "John three thirty-six, He—that believeth on the Son—hath—hath—present tense, thank God, everlasting life."

That testimony burned its way into the heart of the boy who today thanks God for eternal life, a present possession.

"If we accept the testimony of men, the testimony of God is greater; he that hath the Son hath life."

LEATHERLESS SHOE BEING
WORK IN PARTS OF GERMANY

(An Associated Press.)

Berlin, March 4.—A new type of "leatherless shoe" is being widely advertised in the German newspapers. The uppers are made of gray or black waterproof linen cloth, while the soles are built of thin layers of wood glued together with waterproof glue.

Whitewater News

SPRING TIME WARMS
UP BLOOD CROOKS
SAYS CLEVELAND CHIEF

Cleveland, March 4.—A warning was issued to Clevelanders by Police Chief E. J. Connelley that with the advent of spring, crimes of this violence will increase. He warns everybody to take precautions, especially women and persons and neurotics. Bertillon reports here, say the blood undergoes a chemical change in the spring, creating a turmoil in the physical system which releases the blood.

"Crimes against property are more numerous in winter than summer," Rowe stated. "This probably is explained by the fact that means of escape are fewer in the cold months. Crimes of personal violence reach their maximum during June and July."

Side Lights on the Circus Business

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later
Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses

(Copyrighted.)

Work at the different winter quarters of the big shows is nearing an end and it will only be a short time until everything in the way of fittings for the coming season will be in readiness. One of the greatest improvements to the outfit of the great Ringling show is the six solid steel sleepers made for the use of that show the coming season. In a letter from Baraboo of recent date, the following interesting data is given as to the refitting of that great show for the coming season.

The Ringling and Vaudeville (credit for latter name due Ed F. Norwood, representative of Ringling Brothers) given by the B. P. O. Elks No. 888 of Baraboo, Wis., at the new All Ringling Theatre on Monday and Tuesday nights, Feb. 14 and 15th, and in which many circus and vaudeville performers participated was a success in every way. The show was filled to capacity on both nights.

"F. J. Worrell, manager of both the theatre and Ringling Circus, extended every possible courtesy to the professionals on the program, including sleigh ride to the show's winter quarters under the escort of John R. Agee, vaudeville director, where Mr. Deunman had his troupe of thirty elephants and a host of other animals, and a trip to the car shops, where Pete Hirst, master of transportation, was putting the eighty-four cars, including six new steel vestibuled Pullmans, in condition for the season. Mr. Worrell also played host at the Elk Lodge rooms, where a supper was served."

It was on March the sixth, 1897 that the Adam Forepaugh Show for the first time opened in Madison Square Garden, New York City, under advance sale, which opened one week in advance, amounted to something more than $30,000 and much of this money was for boxes which were held six people, and sold for $2,000 a box. These were occupied by famous men and women, both financially and socially, and among them one that was particularly noticeable, and that was Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Part of this story I have told you before, but just at this time it will prove of interest for at the death of this famous financier and writer, in her will she left her millions to the suffragette cause, and now the relatives are fighting it out in the courts, and asking that the will be set aside.

Mrs. Frank Leslie was not only a brilliant writer, but a financier, and at that time she visited every department around the show, and on our tour of inspection, many orders have already been received for the Cincinnati Show, there is no telling when the end will come.

I have been asked many times who I considered the greatest leader of men that I know in the show business. While this is a hard question to answer, yet there were at least three men that were positive in their work and all great leaders, and yet in a different way.

Adam Forepaugh was a natural general and leader of men, being large and full of men, but in a different way about him, but he was always a great leader, both among the officers and performers around the show, as well as the working men.

Forepaugh gave around the show in any department was always final, and never questioned. In times of trouble of any kind he was always in the front rank and his orders especially among his own people were always looked upon as final.

James A. Bailey for so many years manager of the Barnum Show, was a great leader of men, but in a different way. Mr. Bailey was quiet and unassuming, always to be found with the show, and his orders, although given in a quiet way, carried their weight and many of the showmen, after taking one bottle of Bailey's entirely cured, and I sleep soundly all night. Foley Kidney Pills tone up weak, sluggish kidneys, rid the body of poisons, give appetite, energy and refreshing sleep.—W. T. Sherer.

THEY LET HIM SLEEP

H. T. Strayner, Gainesville, Ga., N. C. 3, was unable to sleep all night without getting up. "Somebody only a few minutes after going to bed, I would have to get up, and I tried everything I heard of for the trouble. Finally I tried Foley Kidney Pills and after taking one bottle I believe I am entirely cured, and I sleep soundly all night." Foley Kidney Pills tone up weak, sluggish kidneys, rid the body of poisons, give appetite, energy and refreshing sleep.—W. T. Sherer.

no difference what the order might be, they would carry out his wishes, and no one ever questioned what it was exactly the thing to do.

Another great leader of men, and one who had a tendency to draw all kinds of people around him, who were in his employ, was the late Al. Ringling. He, too, was different from either Adam Forepaugh or James A. Bailey, in this way, that Al. Ringling was in every department around the show, and any orders that Al. Ringling gave, were always final and carried out to the letter. So that while all these men were great leaders of men, it was in different ways. But in any line of work or business, these men would have proved themselves great generals.

A very large consignment of Siberian camels was released from quarantine at Baltimore, and two each to be shipped over the country to zoological gardens, circuses and motion picture people. The camels were imported by Carl Hagenbeck from Hamburg, and successfully passed the rigid inspection made by government officials. Ten to the Barnum & Bailey Show, ten to the Philadelphia, New York and Boston Zoos. The Shriners of Columbia, S. C. got two for their convention to be held in that city in May.

All these camels have been handled by S. A. Stephan, general manager of the Cincinnati Zoological Garden, and American agent for the Hagenbeck's and in addition to that, he has shipped to the Memphis Zoo, two excellent hippopotamuses and a number of antelopes.

Only one death has been reported in the several consignments coming from the great zoologist Mr. Hagenbeck, in spite of the cold rough trip across the Atlantic. The chill of the weather proved too severe for a twenty-eight foot python from India, one of the finest serpents Mr. Hagenbeck has had in years, which weighed about 230 pounds. It died and was buried at sea. It was coming to this country for Howe's Great London Show.

Mr. Stephen reports the shipment to the Hagenbeck Garden from Africa of a large consignment of zebras, and from India a large consignment of elephants. Many orders have already been received for the Cincinnati Show, there is no telling when the end will come.

A WARM HOUSE ON THE COLDEST DAYS

Go into a home that is heated with a Gilt Edge Furnace and note how warm and comfortable it is, at all hours of the day. You wake up to a warm house in the morning and it stays the same because the Gilt Edge is easily controlled and regulated and uses a surprisingly small amount of coal.

THERE'S A GILT EDGE FURNACE TO FIT ANY HOME.

It Tells You How to Build Them

The kind of home you want is a homelike home—not just a house. Well, here is a beautifully illustrated booklet, called "Homelike Homes," that shows floor plans and interior as well as exterior views of many such homes.

We want to help you with your home-planning. Don't you want a copy of "Homelike Homes"? It is free. This is a little book you will value highly; it is worth keeping. Talk over your plans with us. We can help you and will gladly do so.

Your Dream of a Home

Can be more easily and more quickly realized if you will come and talk with us about your plans.

For instance, we show here the first floor plan and an outside view of a very attractive bungalow style of house. This will make you a delightful home.

There is a cozy seat by the stairs in the large living room, a built-in sideboard in the dining room, and a fine sleeping porch on the second floor.

You ought to see the second floor plan. Come in and let us show you this and other designs. Ask us to show you Design C-8.

$195 THE IDEAL INSTRUMENT FOR THE CHILDREN

A Piano at $195—such a piano as this one—would not be possible except under extraordinary conditions.

The factory making this instrument is a division of the Hallet & Davis Piano Co., who are one of the largest piano institutions in the country. Their tremendous manufacturing facilities, in addition to three-quarters-of-a-century experience in piano-building, make this little Princess Model Lexington Piano possible at the price of $195.

The savings comes in the simple case design and in details where saving does not sacrifice real musical worth.

Call at the store and see, hear, play this sweet-toned little instrument.
